Dear [LGBA],

I am sorry to hear about your friend but we totally understand. I will leave [Ofcom] to liaise with your office to arrange a new date and time.

Yours sincerely,

Adam

Sincere apologies to everyone, but I have to make an unexpected visit to [xxxxxx]. I am so sorry but I have to leave very early Wed morning and will not be able to make the meeting.

Perhaps we can reschedule for any date from 16 Sep onwards, once the case against us brought by [xxxxxx] is out of the way.

Kind regards [LGBA]

Dear [LGBA],

Thank you for your email. I would be happy to meet you, along with my fellow director, [Ofcom], who leads on diversity and inclusion issues in the Standards and Audience Protection Team. You may not be surprised to hear but we would disagree with a lot of what was said in the article that you have cited.

I suggest that in order to make the most effective use of the time when we meet, we write to you ahead of our meeting setting out various clarifications and corrections that we feel are necessary in relation to the article.

I will ask xx [Ofcom] to contact you to arrange a mutually convenient time when we might meet.

Yours sincerely,

Adam

Hi Adam - hope you are well.

When we last spoke - many months ago - I believe we agreed that it would be a step forward to have a face to face meeting after the pandemic.

Following publication of your recent report (see link to James Kirkup's article in The Spectator) there is a renewed urgency to this. <https://www.spectator.co.uk/article/the-bbc-gets-new-orders-back-trans-rights-ignore-women#>

As we have discussed previously, we are concerned not only about the impartiality of the BBC, but more importantly, the impartiality of OFCOM.

Pleas can you advise when you might be available for a meeting?

Kind regards

[LGBA]
