I am writing from an area in East Sussex that does not even have the most basic of internet services. We cannot get internet access through phone lines let alone broadband! This is not acceptable in todays' society. Out of a group of 5 houses 4 need access for business and all of which need internet access increasingly for children's homework. We have none. This in 2015 is not acceptable. Everyone has very expensive individual solutions for their problem however this limits usage therefore our we and our children are not getting the same access to information as their peers. Intermittent access at a high cost to ourselves does not help in the running of the various businesses. We all pay into the system like everyone else however do not reap any of the rewards. We are forgotten in the countryside. Many of the main routes through the village are beginning to be catered for with digital communication but you do not have to stray far off the main route to be not only left with a poor service but none at all in our case. I would appreciate anything you can do to improve this intolerable disparity of opportunity.
